The size of the display available on mobile devices is generally referred to as the viewport. This can be, for example, the display of a smartphone, tablet or phablet. However, the term viewport has a more specific meaning as a meta element in HTML5 and is an important component of mobile optimization. It is used to optimally utilize the size of the display by scaling the content to be displayed. The meta element Viewport ensures that the content is displayed correctly and, above all, completely and legibly. This is done by adjusting the width and length of a website so that a mobile browser can optimally display this page. The ability to zoom into a website can also be defined with the Viewport element. Mozilla Corporation, Attn: Legal Notices – Privacy, 331 E. Evelyn Ave, Mountain View, CA 94041, E-Mail: compliance@mozilla.com, https://developer.mozilla.org/en-US/docs/Web/HTML/Viewport_meta_tag. The Privacy Policy is available at: <https://www.mozilla.org/de/privacy/websites/>.

– Sender Policy Framework (SPF)

A method used to prevent the sender address of an e-mail from being falsified, more precisely to prevent the sending of e-mail via unauthorized mail transfer agents (MTAs). SPF is implemented in web forms. With SPF, the holder of a domain enters into the Domain Name System which addresses of MTAs are authorized to send e-mails for that domain. The recipient checks whether the sender is authorized to send e-mails. For this purpose, the recipient checks which domain the sender has entered in the fields "MAIL FROM" and "HELO" in the SMTP connection. For the specified domain, the recipient retrieves the SPF information via the Domain Name System and compares the IP address of the sending MTA with the permitted addresses. If the IP address matches, the sender is authentic, otherwise the e-mail can be discarded. The provider is InterNexum GmbH, Blumstrasse 54, 02826 Görlitz, Germany. Mail: info@internexum.de, <https://www.spf-record.de/>. Privacy Policy available at: <https://www.spf-record.de/datenschutz>.
